

Bandits Murder Woman In Home

Husband and Daughter Wounded When Four Attempt Holdup at Farm—Hired Man Escapes and Spreads Alarm—Posse Makes Search.

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee.—Posses Friday continued to search for the four bandits who murdered Mrs. Sophie Hoyer, 43, shot and probably fatally wounded Moritz Hoyer, 50, and shot Emily Hoyer, 19, at the Hoyer farm here, 18 miles north of this city on the Port Washington road, last night.

Gaining entrance into the house on the pretext of using the telephone, two of the bandits ordered the occupants to hold up their hands. Mrs. Hoyer, not understanding English well, hesitated and the bandits at once opened fire. She fell with two bullet wounds, one in her forehead and one in her side.

Moritz Hoyer, who was upstairs, rushed down at the sound of the firing and was greeted with a shower of bullets and fell mortally wounded.

Emily Hoyer was wounded when three bullets were sent into her arm. She is believed to be crippled for life.

Benjamin Koompan, hired hand and fiancé of Emily Hoyer, escaped through a rain of bullets, uninjured and rushing outside, shouted for help. This escape disconcerted the two bandits in the house and they joined the two on the outside and fled.

Posses were formed and search continued throughout the night without success. The bandits were not more than 23 years of age and amateurs, according to the officials.

PULPWOOD FIRE BRINGS BIG LOSS

Port Edwards Papermill Loses $500,000 in Conflagration Thursday.

By United Press Leased Wire
Port Edwards.—Fire, accompanied by a high wind, totally destroyed the wood yards of the Edwards-Nekosco Paper company here late yesterday. Damage was estimated at more than $500,000 Friday by officials of the company.

The flames, fanned by the wind, scorched houses within two blocks, and on several occasions set them on fire. The loss from these blazes was slight, however.

The flames spread rapidly and were soon beyond the control of the local fire department and the Wisconsin Rapids department, which was called when the flames threatened to destroy the homes in the vicinity.

FOREST FIRES STOP AS WIND SUBSIDES

By United Press Leased Wire.
Bibbing, Minn.—The high wind which yesterday fanned forest and brush fires over the Iron range had died down Friday and there was no more serious danger. Forest ranger D. L. McIntosh reported Friday.

A railroad bridge on the Great Northern near Deer River, was burned during the forest fires yesterday. No other serious damage was reported.

SUSPECT GYPSIES OF STEALING CHILD

Hortonville people have been more or less excited the last day or two over reports that a band of gypsy fortune tellers who have concessions at the Hortonville fair are suspected of having stolen a white child in their meetings. It was reported in Hortonville that police authorities have been asked to detain the gypsies while investigation into the parentage of the child was made.

Authorities here said the report had been received but they have not been asked to make any investigations or to hold the gypsies.

Patrons of the Hortonville fair declare that a white child of about two years of age has been seen in their tents and as a result there have been a lot of curious people standing around the gypsy headquarters.

Members of the band refuse to discuss the case except to maintain that the child is their own.

SOLDIER BUREAU HEAD ON INSPECTION TOUR

Washington, D. C.—Charles R. Forbes, director of the veteran's bureau, left Washington Friday for a tour of inspection of the United States public health service hospitals, vocational rehabilitation schools and regional headquarters of the new veteran's bureau. Forbes will spend three weeks on his tour, which will extend to the Pacific coast.

CONFAB FOR JOBLESS TO BE U. S. WHIP

Harding Wants Congress to See What Laggardness on Big Issues Means.

4 PROBLEMS LOOM AHEAD

Business Men Can't Reopen or Expand Plants Without Tax Knowledge.

By David Lawrence
Copyright, 1921 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington.—The underlying purpose of the unemployment conference called by President Harding is to get Congress employed. The administration realizes that unless the Republic majority gets busy and passes the legislation which is needed to stimulate business throughout the country the number of jobless folk will increase instead of diminish this winter and the congressional elections next fall may develop considerable danger for the party in power.

Congress is taking a vacation at present and the administration reluctantly consented to the recess. But when both houses reconvene the drive will begin to clear the calendar of the vital measures which most everybody believes will mean better industrial and business conditions. Few officials can be found who think the mere calling of an unemployment conference can produce jobs for the idle or food for the hungry. The most that can be accomplished is the collecting of data as to the true conditions of unemployment and the laying of that data before Congress by the doorsteps of the capitol as a sort of mute warning to the republicans that theirs is the responsibility for action on pending bills. It is for the psychological effect that the conference is being called.

President Harding wants Congress to do several things which in his opinion will speed the return to normalcy.

The president wants the pending treaty with Germany and Austria ratified so that America's foreign relations will be clarified and trade resumed with central Europe.

Second, Mr. Harding wants authority given to the treasury department to arrange with the allies for the payment of interest and principal on the ten billions of dollars owed by them. It is hoped that by definitely fixing the time of payments the allies will be able to calculate upon the amounts they must set aside every year toward the payment of the debt and when the allied governments begin to finance themselves on a definite basis the value of their currency will increase and international exchange which is the basis of all trade will tend to become equalized. With exchange improved, the purchasing power of Europe will gradually return. Once the purchasing power of Europe is restored, American surplus goods can be exported and the firms which have closed down their factories will want to reopen them so as to supply Europe. Indeed the international bankers who have favored the League of Nations and American cooperation with Europe in matters of finance would never have closed down if two years ago the United States had ratified the Versailles treaty and entered into closer financial relationship with Europe. However that may be, the fact is the same argument is being made now in behalf of the Hughes-Knox treaty, namely, that ratification will "stabilize economic conditions" in Europe and thus help America to sell her goods.

Third, Congress has been vainly urged to authorize the war finance corporation to use its funds to pay the railroads certain sums owed them. This, it has been contended, would mean the placing of a half billion dollars of money into purchases for equipment and would mean that the steel business and other trades affected by railroad development would have to take back many of the men they have laid off. Mr. Harding pleaded with Congress to act on the railroad bill before it recessed so that an improvement in the industrial situation might result, but the senate refused to allow the plan to interfere with its plans for a month's vacation.

Fourth, Congress has debated first the tariff and then the revenue bill and has failed to pass either one. The administration has urged action right along, contending that the business men of the country want to know what their taxes will be before they make any plans for expansion or the reopening of factories now closed down. It is practically as difficult to operate a business without knowing the size of the years tax bill as it is to set along without knowing from week to week or year to year what the payroll will be. Business petitioned Congress to hurry up and get the tax bill through by July 1 so that planning could be done during the summer months. Now it will be late autumn before there will be a revenue bill. The administration will have to keep congress constantly reminded of its duty to get results on the tax bill, the passage of which is expected to stimulate business.

The unemployment conference is generally commended in Washington as a move in the direction of discovering the true facts, but when any body asks an administration official what is to be done with the facts, what remedies are proposed, the inevitable answer is a shrug of the shoulders and the expression of a hope that congress will take heed and employ itself with pending legislation.

AMATEURS SOON TO TALK WITH EUROPE

Wireless Enthusiasts Will Await Tests of New Equipment in December.

By United Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Ill.—The American boys will soon be able to talk with the boys in Europe—via wireless.

Perfection of equipment has made it possible for amateur sets to speak at much greater distances. F. H. Schnell, traffic manager of the American Relay Radio league, in convention here, told the United Press Friday.

Tests will be made in December, when a certain day will be set aside for the American amateurs to get in touch with those in Europe. The high powered government and commercial stations were the only ones able to communicate across the Atlantic by wireless.

Regulations to prevent amateurs from conflicting with transcontinental wireless were adopted Friday. The rules provide that amateurs may use their instruments at certain hours only, while the transcontinental sets are idle.

More than 20,000 messages were sent during the month by amateurs, Schnell said in explaining the great development of the wireless among amateurs.

CORBETT WILL SPEAK AT NATIONAL MEETING

Hugh G. Corbett, secretary of the chamber of commerce, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address on "Retail Trade Development at the annual convention of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries in New Orleans, Oct. 24, 25 and 26. Mr. Corbett is to speak Oct. 25.

The invitation states that the program committee had considered a large number of men to deliver an address on that important subject and had selected Mr. Corbett because of his knowledge of retail trade and its development.

Troops Sent To Mine Fields

Miner Army Is Ready To Call Quits

Embattled Miners Determined to Fight Until United States Troops Take Charge—Fighting Results in Casualties.

By Harold D. Jacobs
By United Press Leased Wire
With the Miners in the Field, Logan County (By Courier to Madison, W. Va.)—West Virginia's civil war was about at an end Friday.

The army of crusading miners, perhaps six thousand strong, prepared to lay down, or picket its arms and return home when federal troops arrived on the battlefield.

The government's intervention was all that saved this region from being the scene of one of the bloodiest battles in industrial warfare history.

I can make this statement authoritatively after a thorough personal survey of the situation in the battle zone and conversations with hundreds of embattled miners. They had reached a point where they recognized no authority but that of the United States government.

The miners were obsessed with the single idea that the only law under which they could get a square deal was that administered at Washington and they were going on fighting until the law was invoked.

My observations during a visit to the vicinity of the firing line in this region convinced me of the danger that the skirmishing might at any moment flare up into a major engagement with casualties on both sides numbering hundreds where to date there had only been scores.

"The minute the federal troops come in here we will throw down our arms and go home. Until then we will fight and fight like hell," a leader of the miners told me. "We can't trust anybody now but the United States government. We were crossed by the state and county authorities. Our only law is our powerless without government backing."

"If the regulars don't come in, we'll have to settle this ourselves. We'll fight the state constabulary and mine guards until we lick them or get licked. And before we're licked, practically every union miner in West Virginia will be on the firing line."

This conversation was punctuated by the sharp cracking of rifle fire and the occasional staccato rattling of a machine gun, popping somewhere just beyond the little wooded hill that was our shelter from the fire.

The echoes of the steep hillsides magnified this desultory firing into the auditory proportions of a general engagement. The sniping was especially concentrated in a narrow valley through which runs a tiny creek. The miners were hidden by the trees and dense undergrowth.

At this particular point the shooting had been practically continuous for three days. The real casualties among the miners here were two wounded. In return they say they killed at least one man and believe they "pinked" several others.

The line here was held by perhaps 200 men. They believed twice their number was opposing them. They were content to hold the place for the time being but were eager to take part in a general advance.

"They were more anxious, however, for the appearance of O. D., and the end of it all."

THINK IRISH NOTE ASKS FOR FURTHER DECISIVE MEETING

Quiet Is Restored in Belfast After 17 Were Killed, 200 Wounded.

By United Press Leased Wire
Dublin.—A formal conference between Sinn Fein leaders and the British government, at which decisions for home rule or more warfare must be reached, has been proposed by the Daily Express in the latest communication to Lloyd George. It was believed Friday.

The text of the Irish reply was not made public but it was understood this is what the Sinn Fein cabinet now desired—a conference at which the definite decision should be taken.

If Lloyd George, who received the Irish note at his vacation camp in the wilds of northern Scotland, accepts the proposals for a conference, the land will ask that it be held at the earliest possible date.

Meanwhile the Daily was to be re-convened in order that it might be asked to ratify the selection of Seán Fin plenipotentiaries.

Belfast—Quiet had been restored here Friday. The total casualties were given as 17 killed, 200 wounded. Troops continued to keep watch at danger points.

"GHOST POND" GIVES UP HORDE OF AUTOS

Summit, Ill.—Night and day divers continue to fish in the "ghost pond" here—for automobiles.

Under its 60 feet of brackish water 160 stolen cars valued at $250,000 lie buried.

With the aid of giant derricks the divers are working to bring the machines to the surface.

A score of police representatives from many cities and several national insurance inspectors are supervising the rescue.

It is their belief that the "ghost pond"—in reality an abandoned quarry—has been used as a cache by auto thieves who dispose of cars to collect the insurance.

The divers' discoveries have dispelled a superstitious legend that the quarry was haunted.

For two years in the dead of night they have become accustomed to hearing automobiles racing down the one-way road leading to the quarry.

And the cars never came back. "Ghosts!" the neighbors said.

Then one night the last car went by.

Those who drove it over the precipitous cliff were not aware that the pond was filled to overflowing—with stolen cars.

It went in but so many others were resting underneath that next morning its tonneau stood out of the water with the chassis resting on a solid foundation of 30 other cars.

Then the divers got to work.

PHILIPPINE POST GOES TO GEN. WOOD

By United Press Leased Wire
Manila.—Major General Leonard Wood Friday accepted the post of governor-general of the Philippine Islands which has been tendered to him by President Harding.

At the request of President Harding, General Wood will go at once to China on a diplomatic mission. He will return early in October after which he will, it is understood, formally take office.

Old Fashioned "Huskin' Bee" Is To Be Held

Boys and girls in the town of Center at last are getting set for a "big time" huskin' bee. Henry Griesbach, route 4, holds a huskin' bee next week. It is reported on reliable authority that the number of red cars will be sufficiently large to provide plenty of entertainment for the corn huskers.

This will be the first huskin' bee in these parts in many years. Modern machinery has done away with the old time method of husking corn but Mr. Griesbach has a considerable crop which is still in the husks and is on his barn floor awaiting attention.

A "feed" and a dance will add to the entertainment.

Caruso Lives In Memory As Church Prays

By Paul R. Mallon.

New York.—Opera stars, shopkeepers, churchmen and fruit vendors jammed the little church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel here Friday to offer tears and prayers for the soul of Enrico Caruso.

"But he is not dead—he lives," the Rev. Francesco Magliocco, personal friend of the tenor and noted opera composer, declared in his eulogy. "He will live forever as the greatest artist of all time."

Famous stars of the Metropolitan stage, who sang with Caruso in life, sobbed through the solemn hymns of the mass.

Need Huge U. S. Loan Unless Europe Pays

Senators Looking for Money to Pay Back Loans Made by Public During War—Estimated Need Is About Eight Billion.

By L. C. Martin
By United Press Leased Wire
Washington, D. C.—The government shortly will be forced to ask the American people to subscribe to a huge loan of from $7,500,000,000 to $8,000,000,000, members of the senate finance committee declared Friday.

This sum will be required by 1923 to pay back to American citizens the money they have already loaned Uncle Sam and for which they hold victory notes, war savings stamps and short time certificates of indebtedness. These obligations must be paid in cash and to obtain this huge sum, a new loan must be floated.

Appeals probably will be made to these bondholders to exchange their holdings for the new bond.

In other words, according to senators, the government finds itself unable to pay off any of this debt and must renew it for a further term of years.

"There is absolutely no way around this," said Senator Smoot, Utah, Friday.

When it became apparent that domestic revenues would not provide sinking funds to meet the 1923 debts, officials sought some way of collecting from Europe enough of the $11,000,000,000 owed the United States to help out. The treasury still hopes that will be possible. It is merely a hope, however.

SEEK ROBBER WHO ASSAILED WOMAN

Lake Geneva Woman Gagged and Knocked Senseless When She Screamed.

Lake Geneva, Wis.—Deputy Sheriffs and volunteer posss today were searching this vicinity for the unidentified assailant of Mrs. Jack Lowry, who, while alone in her home suddenly saw the man rummaging around in a rear room. When she screamed the man seized her and after binding and gagging her, tied her securely to a chair. When she again was struck over the head, knocking her senseless.

After she regained consciousness, she crawled to a phone and the operator summoned the police. The assailant had disappeared in the meantime.

War To End As Soldiers Take Places

Miners Declare They Will Disband Army as Soon as Federal Troops Take Over Command—Martial Law Order Is Withheld.

By United Press Leased Wire
Charleston, W. Va.—The United States army Friday was in supreme command of the state of West Virginia.

Governor E. F. Morgan abdicated in favor of General H. H. Bandholtz, who will command soldiers on their way into the state. Gov. Morgan issued a proclamation informing the citizens of his action.

The governor issued instructions to peace officers of the state to obey the command of the federal forces.

The proclamation, addressed "to all and county officers, civil and military and deputies, assistants and subordinates," follows:

"Whereas the United States troops have at my request been ordered to this state for the purpose of quelling an insurrection, the peace officers of this state will obey the direction of the officer commanding the United States troops or his properly designated representatives."

The arrival of federal troops automatically imposes a condition of martial law, it was held, whether a formal proclamation is issued.

General Bandholtz was preparing a proclamation announcing the suspension of the constitution in which all citizens except peace officers are forbidden to carry arms.

Troops were ordered into the coal fields early Friday.

The orders were issued shortly after 4 a. m. by Major General James G. Harbord, acting chief of staff, and Adjutant General Harris, who remained at the war department all night to keep a close watch on the situation.

Decision to send the federal troops into the coal fields was reached after the receipt of a report from General H. H. Bandholtz of Charleston, in which he stated the miners were not dispersing in accordance with the command of President Harding.

"I am satisfied the miners will not obey the president's proclamation," Bandholtz wrote.

"I request that federal troops be sent immediately."

The first of the federal forces are expected to reach the trouble area late Friday.

Early Thursday night it appeared to war department officials that federal intervention would be necessary. Reports clearly showed that the miners were not dispersing and under the president's proclamation only one course was open to the federal government. The actual ordering of troops to the coal fields was delayed long past the time limit of noon Friday fixed, by President Harding for the voluntary dispersal of the miners' army in the hope that eleventh hour attempts of General Bandholtz and union leaders to induce the men to return to their homes would be successful.

WILL MEET HERE TO DISCUSS PLANS FOR ADVERTISING

Valley Publicity Campaign to Get Underway—Will Name Committees.

A meeting of representatives of Fox River valley chambers of commerce will be held in Appleton in the near future to discuss a joint campaign to advertise the valley. Hugh G. Corbett, managing secretary of the local chamber, was instructed to invite the valley representatives to meet here by the board of directors at a meeting Thursday evening. All the chambers in the valley except Green Bay have signified a willingness to consider the matter. Green Bay thus far has declined to enter the joint campaign inasmuch as it is now working on a city booklet. It will be explained to this chamber that the joint campaign will supplement the individual publicity efforts of the various chambers.

A meeting of the chamber executive committee is to be held Friday to appoint the season's forum committee and a special committee to consider the community building proposition.

Prof. Leonard C. Smith, city planner, told the directors of the work that has been done thus far, and asked for suggestions. It is probable that Mr. Smith will make similar reports to other organizations in Appleton and ask for suggestions.

The chamber of commerce has been asked to assist the Capper Press of Topeka, Kas., headed by Senator Arthur Capper, to secure information in a nationwide survey which is being made by the Capper publications. Blanks are to be distributed to merchants in various lines with the request that they be filled out.

Troops Are On Way

Washington, D. C.—Martial law for the mine war area of West Virginia was considered by President Harding's cabinet Friday as federal troops were being rushed into the state to end hostilities.

The proclamation of martial law, which has not been used under similar circumstances since shortly after Civil war days, will be promulgated, only if the miners offer resistance to the federal troops, Secretary of War Weeks indicated.

In view of United Press reports that the miners will return to their homes as soon as "the regulars" arrive, Weeks was hopeful it would not be necessary to resort to martial law, but emphasized that the federal government is determined to restore order promptly.

President Harding has signed but not promulgated the martial law proclamation for the five counties of Kanawha, Fayette, Boone, Logan and Mingo.

The troops from Camp Sherman, Ohio, the secretary said, should reach the coal field by 8 o'clock tonight, while the Camp Dix contingent is due at Charleston about midnight. With each regiment Adjutant General Harris said, is a machine gun company.

Rations for several days are aboard the troop trains now moving, and orders have gone to Major General George W. Read, commanding the Fifth corps area at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, to rush other supplies for a protracted occupation, should it become necessary.

Mine War to End

Charleston W. Va.—Sendings of federal troops to West Virginia Friday to end the mine war were welcomed by state officials, the United Mine Workers and the United Mine Workers and the coal operators.

With the dispatch of troops, the southwestern counties will be put under martial law. Under martial law, the idle mines are expected to resume operation.

Philip Murray, national vice president of the miners, welcomed Bandholtz's move.

"From what I learned on my trip Thursday, the authorities took the only course open to them," he said. "Every man I talked to assured me he would leave for home immediately upon the arrival of federal troops."

STATE COMMISSION TRYING TO SAVE FISH

Fish Are Seined Out of Stagnant Water and Transferred to Lake.

The Wisconsin conservation commission has assured anglers of the state that steps are being taken to conserve what fish still remain in the Fox river. Commission experts said rough fish were the principal sufferers because of the lack of oxygen in the water. Commissioner Braxton C. Webster said that steps have been taken to conserve the fish supply.

"While there are some reports that the fish are still dying in the lake waters I believe that the time has passed and that the fish now on the shores are those that died some time past," said Mr. Webster on Thursday.

The rough fish seemed to be the principal ones to suffer. The carp and suckers could not stand the lack of air and we had some reports for the smaller white bass and some perch. For the most part, however, the game fish were not affected to any degree.

"The fish that are dying in the Fox river are dying as a result of the stagnant green water that accumulates just above and below the government dams at the paper mill sites at Neenah, Menasha and Appleton. We have had a crew of men at work at Neenah and Menasha seining the fish out of these stagnant waters and taking them above the dams into the cooler and fresher lake water. These crews will resume work again next week.

The new Secretaria Course and Course in Higher Accounting at Bushey's is proving very popular with the better class of students. You'll like the school under its new management.

and we hope to save the life of several thousand game fish in those waters whether the government opens the dams as requested or not."

HARRY LA FOND AGAIN IN CLUTCHES OF LAW

Harry La Fond, 30, Appleton, and Miss Loretta Hebler, 21, Neenah, were arrested Thursday night at the Briggs house on a statutory charge. They had registered at the hotel as husband and wife.

LaFond recently was acquitted of serious charges in municipal court in Oshkosh and still more recently was fined as a speeder.

When taken before Judge A. M. Spencer in municipal court Friday morning, the pair pleaded guilty to the charge and LaFond was sentenced to 30 days in the county workhouse. His companion received a 30 days jail sentence.

"Rest And Let Rest" Is Good Motto For People

Dr. Crafts Says Six Days of Amusement Is Enough for the Public.

"The American public has more amusement in six days than is good for any people," said Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts when being interviewed here in regard to his relation to the well known Blue Laws. "My purpose is to help to enforce the state laws against a commercialized Sunday."

Dr. Crafts denies that the Bureau of Reform and the Wisconsin Lord's Day Alliance with which he is affiliated would return to the old Puritan Sunday, but they object to amusement on Sunday which necessitates that men give up their day of rest. The Bureau of Reform is conducting an extensive campaign against all forms of vice including intoxicants, sex abuse, divorce and polygamy, vagabondism, gambling and the commercialized Sunday.

"A prize fight, said the reformer, is an effort to knock out your opponent, to gratify brutal desires. For this effort the winner receives money. The slaughter house is more manly because there is some reason for its existence. It is far worse than the old practice of dueling because in the duel, one man thought the other had committed some crime which makes him too odious to continue to live. He felt he could not wait for the process of law and so took matters into his own hands.

"The difference between boxing and pugilism? I was a boxer myself years ago and enjoy it much. Boxing is the art of self defense with no intent to injure your opponent. It is a non-commercial, gentlemanly sport which gives ample opportunity for exercise. Usually the boxer uses soft gloves which make his blows less apt to hurt his opponent. Boxing does not rejoice at a blow such as Dempsey gave Carpenter which was aimed to paralyze his entire nervous system."

Dr. Crafts went on to tell that he considered the old Spanish bull fight more genteel than the prize fight. He makes the point that man fighting beast was one of the early necessities of existence, and therefore not unusual, but that when two men in a civilized age fight against each other like two beasts nothing can be said in its favor. He has been instrumental in having many of the laws restricting prize fights passed and is the author of two of them.

"The trouble with so-called recreation as the public sees it today, is that the exercise is for a few men on the field while the hundreds of spectators get their amusement from howling on the side lines. And hundreds of these professional amusement makers die as a result of their exercise. They are not better for their effort as we are led to suppose. American baseball is really a game of howling at the umpire rather than a truly manly sport."

Amusement according to the antipugilism worker is an insult to any thinking American. The word itself denotes lack of ability to do for oneself. It is a word for children who are too weak to put forth the effort. Recreation, a term by which many were amusements are disguised, means exercise for mind and body.

"The working man is happier when his mind is appealed to," said Dr. Crafts. "A good book or a lecture is far better for him than a thriller at the movies. The very nation is neurotic with excitement which exists through all seven days of the week breaking the laws of both God and man."

According to the laborer against vice, too much amusement has made the younger generation today incapable of any serious pursuit. He harks back to the good old days when he was a boy and read poetry and worthwhile books. He said that small boys will not go to Sunday school now because they have to spend the morning in excited contemplation of the great game to be played in the afternoon.

"The proof of the Sunday is the Monday," said Dr. Crafts. "Those who have an exciting Sunday always have a blue Monday. It is possible to have a bright Sunday as well as a bright Monday if the day is used for the intention for which the Lord set it aside. 'Rest and let rest' is a good rule for the Sunday program. Plan your day so that the minimum of work is necessary, that others with whom you come in contact will have as much free time as you have."

The reformer does not object to motoring on Sunday providing that you buy your oil and gas on Saturday so that the filling stations will need only half as much help on the Lord's day, that you cook your food on Saturday so that your servants may have the day to themselves that you drive your own car in order to allow your chauffeur a free day with his family. He claims that all business except for necessity and mercy is illegal according to Wisconsin laws which are not enforced.

"The young people are reaping the harvest from this ill chosen recreation," remarked the anti-excitement specialist. "More girls in their teens from apparently respectable homes are going wrong than ever before. There is more work for the juvenile courts and less opportunity for the Sunday school teacher. The average age of murderers, burglars and other law-breakers is 17. These young people have not the foundation on which to live clean straight lives."

HOUSE SHORTAGE CONTINUES ACUTE DESPITE BUILDING

Uncertainty of Values and Earnings Caused Building
Slump, Dealers Say.

While the housing situation in Appleton is no worse than a year ago, local real estate men declare that the slight improvement does not begin to measure up to expectations expressed last spring. They blamed the continued house shortage to general economic conditions and to the fact that Appleton is a desirable place to live.

"There are practically no houses for rent," said D. P. Steinberg. "There are a few houses for sale but prospective buyers feel that prices are too high. Those who moved out of the city in the spring without having a definite assurance of a place to return to will now experience considerable difficulty in getting relocated. A few Appleton people moved to Lake cottage in the spring and had houses built in town during the summer. This will relieve the situation slightly."

"In spite of the fact that 100 or more houses were built here this summer," said P. A. Kornely, "the housing situation is as bad as it was last fall. Fortunately, it is no worse. Few people are moving because they prefer to hold on to what they have. Some people who left the city for the summer rented their houses furnished. The tenants are now being forced out by the return of the owners and will have difficulty in getting places to live."

"Many houses in the city are for sale but few are being sold. People fear a drop in price but as yet there is no drop and if it does come, I do not believe it will be great. However, people are talking it and thinking it. This causes a few owners who bought high-priced houses to feel that they should 'unload' before the drop comes so they offer their property for sale."

"Others who bought by a small instalment payment and are paying by instalment now find themselves unable to meet their obligations so they are anxious to sell. Another class of house owners are out of work and want to 'cash in' on their property. For the same reason that owners wish to sell, buyers hesitate to buy. The man who wants a house fears prices will drop and he doesn't want to risk taking a loss. In other cases, the prospect of a loss does not hinder the sale of a house but it's the fact that the prospective buyers is not sure of his income for the next few months and therefore hesitates to assume new obligations."

"Houses for rent are in demand by a large number of 'middle class' people, especially traveling salesmen who prefer Appleton to nearby cities because of its central location and its other advantages."

Three classes of people want houses in Appleton, according to D. E. Vaughn. People from other towns and cities want to come here for various reasons. They insist that Appleton is a desirable place to live because of its educational facilities, its central position in a prosperous locality, its size and because concrete highways radiate in all directions from the city. These folks comprise one class of home-seekers. The next class is the young people who would like to begin housekeeping. The other class is those people who are already living here but who are in cramped quarters and long for a place where they could have more room.

"A surplus of houses would draw people to Appleton," said Mr. Vaughn, "and the surplus would soon be absorbed. Appleton could continue to build as many houses annually for several years as this summer and still not keep even with the demand."

Houses are not being built because they are not a good investment, said R. E. Carnecross. Taxes on a house amount to three per cent of its value and insurance and repairs will aggregate one per cent. That means 4 per cent and in order to get 5 per cent on his investment, the owner must ask a rental which will net him 10 per cent. To illustrate in the case of a house costing $6,000. To yield 6 per cent net on the investment, the house would have to rent for $600 per year or $50 per month. The tenant feels that this is exorbitant and thinks he should not have to pay more than $40 per month. If the owner wants to net 8 per cent on the investment he must charge rental of $60 per month and immediately he is regarded as a "rent hog" by the tenant.

It is this situation that prevents men from investing in new houses. Radical changes will have to be brought about in economic conditions before there will be much relief from the housing dilemma, Mr. Carnecross believes.

There is no possibility of building any large number of houses, Mr. Vaughn believes, due to the uncertainty of the labor and materials market and because little money is available for house construction. Most surplus money has been invested in bonds paying 8 per cent interest so very little is left. People would rather invest in these bonds than in lending money on a mortgage on a new house which would yield them only 6 per cent. Prospective house builders who have some money are deterred by uncertainty in the general situation and because of the high rate of interest. A few men with $1,000 would like to build a house costing around $4,000. Those having money, however, will not lend it on a mortgage which exceeds half the value of the house. In this case the loan would be only $2,000 and the prospective builder would still lack $1,000 so he cannot build.

Most houses now being built are for their owners and not for tenants. This, of course, gives some relief to the situation but real estate men are of the opinion that appreciable relief will not be felt until the time comes again when houses are built for tenants as an investment.

Learning Barber Trade Proves Difficult Task

Public and Barber Profession
May Cause Shortage of Apprentices.

The fastidious public may cause a shortage of barbers.

This is the opinion of Appleton barbers. There are only two ways in which a man may learn the trade. He may serve an apprenticeship in a shop or he may go to a barber school. The latter way is beset with many difficulties and discouragements. In the first place, the state of Wisconsin does not recognize barber schools or colleges. In the second place, the barber trade is unfriendly to these schools and barbers hesitate to hire a man who has taken a course with them.

The barbers declare that the barber colleges are operated for purely mercenary motives. They frequently advertise that they can teach the trade to a young man in two months. This is said to be impossible because it takes at least three years of constant practice for one to become an adept barber. The state board of health will not issue a barber's license to anyone unless he has had three years' practical work in a shop. Thus, of course, discredits the barber colleges because as far as state regulations are concerned, time spent at school is time lost.

The other way in which one may learn the trade is also very doubtful. The average man does not want a novice hogging off his whiskers or trimming his locks. Many men, declare the barbers, would refuse to take the chair if they knew on apprentice was going to work on them.

Men feel that they are being cheated because they must pay just as much for work done by an apprentice as for work done by an expert. This is a rule of the union. The attitude of the fastidious public precludes most barber shops from taking apprentices. Barbers say the apprentice drives trade from their shops. Regular customers avoid the shop because they are afraid the apprentice will be assigned to practice on them. City shops are particularly opposed to taking apprentices.

There is a possibility of a young man taking apprentice work in shops in villages especially if he is a native of the place. If Tom Brown who is well known and well liked by the people of his village, decides to serve as an apprentice in Joe Doe's barber's shop, it is very likely that the men of the village will be glad to give Tom a chance to learn and will not object to having him do their work. However this kindly feeling does not exist in the cities. Tom may get around the situation in small places by going away to some city barber school for a few weeks and then return to the shop as an apprentice. This method may give him the desired start in learning the trade.

In this respect only, barbers concede that barber schools may be of help but they say that practical experience from the start under the direction of a competent barber is preferable. Until he has had three years' practical work the union will not admit him to membership.

RIVER AS BAD 9 YEARS AGO, BRIDGETENDER SAYS

Present conditions of the river is nothing new to Otto Nelson who has had charge of Lake St. drawbridge for the last twenty years. He said, however, he never saw so many dead fish. He recalls the river having been flushed by the government on previous occasions, the last time, nine years ago, when the water was lower than it is now, but when conditions were less serious.

TRAINS CARRY BIG TOTAL OF "FREE TOURISTS" NOW

Unemployed men in search of work and who take advantage of the "blind baggage" and open box cars of freight trains in getting from one city to another are seldom molested by trummen, judging from the number on trains passing through Appleton Junction. The men travel in groups of from four to eight and are usually headed for the larger cities.

This mode of searching for work was one thing that impressed John L. Hettinger, who recently returned from an automobile trip to the Pacific coast. He said the roofs of nearly all the cars in the freight trains crossing the plains were occupied by men in search of work and apparently they were not disturbed.

Miss Jean Patterson, 437 Pacific-st., submitted an operation at St. Elizabeth hospital Wednesday.

Earl Kraemer left for St. Louis Thursday morning for a short visit.

William Jose, Brewster-st., has returned from Rib Lake, where he attended the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Carl Zimke.

TWO TREATIES

In recent Washington dispatches the point has been made that as a result of the new Berlin treaty we have such an interest in the Versailles treaty as we never had before. That, of course, is true. For we have made the Versailles agreement a part of the new treaty, and have passed on the former all the rights that are written into the latter. If, therefore, the parties to the Versailles treaty should decide to abrogate it we should have—so it is said—no foundation for our rights or for the separate treaty with Germany. While there is little possibility of abrogation, it is nevertheless true that the value of the Berlin treaty depends wholly on the will of other powers. "The foundation on which the separate peace between the United States and Germany rests" would almost certainly never be removed, but it would be for the allied powers to say whether it should be removed. Our interest in the Versailles treaty, is therefore, direct and vital, for 118 out of its 192 pages are written into the new treaty. There might be a question, too, whether any considerable changes in the Versailles treaty would not have the effect of at least weakening the foundation of our rights. The question is an interesting one.

Secretary Hughes must have felt that it was important to keep the Versailles treaty alive, important from the point of view of the United States as, of course, it was. He appears also to have been convinced that it was necessary to keep the League of Nations alive as a going concern—as one of the main props of the treaty of Versailles. That is, we rest on the treaty, and the treaty rests on the League. The way is left open for this government to approve, if it shall so choose, any action of the League of Nations, and to participate or not as it pleases in the work of the reparations commission or of any other commission. The privilege of doing this is reserved, though no obligation is incurred.

It has not been found an easy matter to uphold the rights of America against Germany in a separate treaty, without any reference to what has gone before. Mr. Hughes found, as any secretary of state careful of the interests of the country would have found, that Germany was already a party to a treaty that defined her rights and duties, established her relations to other powers, and limited her freedom of action. The situation was one from which it was impossible to escape. The secretary has gone as far as he could, without sacrificing the rights of the country, in meeting the views of the separate-peace faction, and of the irreconcilables. The country is fortunate in having its rights so carefully safeguarded, and it will hope that the foundation on which they rest, a foundation laid at Versailles, will stand firm.

APARTMENTS AND GARAGES VERSUS HOUSES

Rather confirmative than enlightening are the statistics prepared by Secretary of Labor Davis, showing that more garages than houses were built last year, and more photoplay theatres than churches and hospitals. That the new apartment structures afford shelter to more persons than houses do, and that the number of new schools constructed was but slightly in excess of the number of motion-picture auditoriums, is not surprising information.

This is an apartment, garage and cinema age. It is an age of ease, comfort and as much luxury and show as the people can afford, of more than they should afford. Schools are popular as cultural institutions. Churches are staid reliances for social relationships and formal respectability. The desirabilities which women and men regard as necessities are living conveniences which obviate work and entertainment which may be acquired without trouble or fatigue.

The photograph is in one corner of the music room of the apartment, and the player piano in another corner. Both are operated by motor. The automobile is in the garage, just off the kitchen. The theatre is at the corner, with a restaurant and delicatessen nearby. Men and women do not have to dirty their hands, or work, or put themselves to any bother.

Live in a cottage is the dream of very few persons; even live in a palace is a rare ambition. Gardens and lawns are beautiful, but they need attention, and there is more independence in a house than in an apartment, but care of a house obliges exertion. Personal comfort and lassitude are the common desideratum, and families pay fancy prices to huddle in modern tenements in style and ease and at slight inconvenience.

Secretary Davis' statistics will not be questioned. Their accuracy is apparent at a glance. They corroborate conclusions which have prevailed generally for some time.

JUST A FEW OF WOMAN'S DEMANDS

The proposed twentieth amendment, containing thirty-seven demands which the Woman's Party classifies as rights, looks like it would be more than the constitution of the United States, which is already punctured and debilitated, could bear. Whereas it is the best constitution in the world, it has its limitations, and of late it has been manifesting a disposition toward obesity. Were a few more incommensurate amendments legislated into it, it would need treatment for fatty degeneration of the articles.

Mrs. Florence Hills, chairman of the Woman's Party, declares that the eternal feminine insists on the right to keep her maiden name after marriage; the right to choose the place of residence, even if married; the liability of the husband for antenatal debts of the wife, and the equal liability of husband and wife for the support of the other.

Society soon would blast the constitution if woman actually exercised these demands as rights. It is questionable indeed, whether the majority of the women of America consider demands such as these complimentary to them. Rights to which women are entitled, they should have, and men will not begrudge political equality to those whom they love and respect. On the other hand, so-called rights which would tend to disrupt the marital tie and desecrate the home would be of detriment to women and society, to the extent that the constitution would be superfluous. The letter of the organic law is one thing, but the spirit of the home is another.

ECONOMY IN THE WHITE HOUSE

As special tokens of the highest personal regard, President Harding has been treating his friends and former colleagues in congress to stogies. This is his hospitable way of impressing on them that they are not company, but intimates.

Senators and representatives who have made strenuous efforts to smoke the gifts, and have burned up two or three boxes of matches in trying to keep them lighted, prefer, they say, to be received as guests. So far they have been delighted with the president's society and the aroma of his stogies, but they fear tobacco smoke will give them distemper unless they can do their share of the blowing.

It may be that a new housekeeper has been employed in the White house, and she brought the stogies with her with the thought of cutting down expenses. If the box has a bright label on it, this conjecture is plausible.

REMARKABLE DISAPPEARANCE

Perhaps the most remarkable disappearance in modern times of a prominent public man was that of James Winstanley, a brilliant Oxford scholar, who won the "Hertford" nearly seventy years ago. Winstanley, having become a positivist under the influence of Congress—one of the founders of the new religion consisting of "three persons and no God"—left Oxford and lived in retirement on his Llanegwille estate where he devoted himself to the welfare of his dependents, built a church, and, in the year of his disappearance, was high sheriff. Just before the assizes he went to Ebbw Vale, starting for the pier to meet his mother coming from Bologna, and was never afterward seen by his friends. A boatman at Collierz scouted than an Englishman resembling Winstanley was ferried over to Ehrenbreitstein, and he was supposed to have been drowned, but those who had known his temperament thought it possible that he had immured himself in a monastery.

CHINA'S CONCRETE WORK

Owing to the high cost of timber in China, it has been found economical to make railroads and electric transmission line poles of reinforced concrete. The sleepers are reinforced with old mine cable, states Engineering News-Record, and are cured under water before use. New track is not supplied with concrete sleepers, but laid with ordinary wooden sleepers, which are afterward replaced by concrete when the road bed is well settled. The poles are 40 feet and 50 feet high, and are cast horizontally. They are hollow for four-fifths of their length, square section, and taper, and some of the reinforcing rods are carried above and below the pole to act as lightning conductors. In both cases the concrete mix is 1:2:4, and the poles and sleepers have given complete satisfaction.—Scientific American.

THE PRACTICAL NURSE

A young woman has been engaged more or less of her time as a practical nurse in the homes of her relatives and friends and later in outside work since she was 16 years of age. At 20 she is kept busy constantly, and is paid at the average rate of $32 weekly. She has the good will of physicians in her community, who summon her or recommend her to their patients. She had but one year of high school work. She now desires to know whether it would be wise for her to enter upon a three years' hospital course in order to become a trained nurse.

Good training schools do not, as a rule, admit girls who have not completed four years of high school work or equivalent. Certainly it would not be wise for this young woman to seek training in any other than a good training school. But she complains that trained nurses seem bitter toward her. Even an old girl friend who is now a trained nurse refuses to speak to her since she has taken up practical nursing on a commercial basis.

No one has a higher regard for the trained nurse than I have. I would advise all young men to marry trained nurses if there are no school teachers available. Aside from the superlative qualities of the trained nurse as sweetheart, pal, friend, wife, mother and general good fellow, we must hand her just one brick. She is too come upsh about her "professional" status.

I don't know what pay or salary a trained nurse receives in the community where the young practical nurse lives. Every doctor knows that the majority of substantial families cannot afford to employ trained nurses in extended illness or in frequent illnesses. Every doctor who has had general experience in private practice knows that there are a great many illnesses in which the right kind of practical nurse fills the bill satisfactorily—and a great many families can afford to employ a practical nurse, not merely because her stated salary is lower than the trained nurse's but because she is and should be expected to turn her hand to assist in keeping up the house, as well as care for the invalid. Of course a trained nurse cannot be asked to do that.

There is a great demand for healthy young women of sound moral calibre and fair intelligence in the field of practical nursing. The cue for any such young woman to follow is this: Let her cultivate the acquaintance of good doctors in her community and seek their guidance in the matter of a little reading and study along the lines of practical nursing. Let her learn well the first lesson of nursing, namely, to be honest toward her patient, herself and the doctor and never to assume knowledge of arts which no nurse, practical or trained, can hope to understand such as diagnosis and treatment. Let her respect what amounts to privileged communications—the secrets or confidences which come to her as a nurse. Gossip is fatal to a good nurse. Let her strive to bring comfort into the sickroom and order into the home and she need have no anxiety about commanding the respect of all the world.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Way to Contract TB.

Please tell me whether it is harmful for a girl, aged 17, to sleep with another girl, aged 13, who has tuberculosis. (C. W.)

Answer—That is a very likely way to contract the disease. It is harmful for any one to sleep with another person, when it comes to a question of hygiene.

Salt Water.

Is warm salty water injurious to the eyes when used to bathe them? I injured my eyes by reading fine print. Glasses have given only partial relief. What would you advise? (Mrs. R. H. R.)

Answer—If the amount of salt in the water is about that present in the tears, it will be uninteresting. The right amount is a heaping teaspoonful of common salt to the pint of recently boiled water. This is comparatively harmless for bathing the eyes, but has no particular medicinal virtue. Perhaps you are wearing improperly fitted glasses.

Lost to the World.

Kindly tell me if it is healthful to sleep in a feather bed. Is it harmful for a man with a leaky heart valve to drink near beer? (Miss D. C.)

Answer—The feather bed is all right in cool weather. Near beer is not a wholesome beverage to drink.

Epsom Salts.

What effect has Epsom salts on the blood? (L. B.) Answer—None, except in an occasional instance of idiosyncrasy when it causes collapse. Epsom salts is magnesium sulphate, which, injected into the blood, exerts a pronounced depressing or sedative effect on the nervous system, not produced by the salts taken internally, as a rule.

D. L. Furstenberg, who had been in the clothing business in Appleton for 15 years, accepted a position with the Continental Clothing Co.

Miss Minnie Petersen left for Milwaukee to begin the final year of her course at the normal school. She was to be joined by her sister, Paulina, who was visiting at Waukegan.

The petrified man who was found in a cedar swamp near Peshtigo a few weeks previous and was supposed to have been a victim of the great fire of '71, was on exhibition in the store in the opera house vacated by Jacob Kohler.

Mr. and Mrs. George Downer, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wroter and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Rogers left for Holland City, Mich., to visit Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Brynes, formerly of Appleton.

Chris Roemer was nominated as elector from this district at the Democratic convention at Milwaukee the day previous.

The India Tea Co. opened a new store in the Patton block at the corner of College-ave. and Morrison-st., which had just been completed.

The Appleton Juvenile band was to give an amateur minstrel performance at the opera house the following Wednesday evening.

The little 4-year-old son of Anton Roemer was knocked down by a buggy at Appleton-st., crossing on College-ave.

A NARROW RANGE.

The motion picture people are at their wits' end for scenes to put on their reels. Don't they know that there are but 37 spots which comprehend every possible human experience and set the limits for dramatists and story and novel writers? Judging by what we have seen on the screen, but a dozen have been used.—Los Angeles Times.

DREAMING OF BANISHMENT.

To dream of banishment signifies that you will have sorrowful news, but it will be of short duration; for a woman to dream that she is banished is a very lucky omen and denotes that she will speedily attain her most sanguine desires.

Beauty And The Beef

By Frederic J. Haskin

Chicago, Ill.—The infection of artistic and literary bacilli, which has been disturbing the sound commercial constitution of Chicago for some years past, has broken out in a new spot. The spot is somewhat remote, but it is in the region north of the Chicago River and between the Lake and State Street.

Haskin

Also the headquarters of an organization for the purpose of finding jobs for women writers and editors, managed by Miss Ruby Black.

But its real distinction is neither as a shop, nor as an agency for the distribution of beautiful scribbles. Its real distinction is that here, once a week, poets and poetesses meet and read their works to themselves and each other and any one else who cares to listen. Some say that there are really two meetings a week at this place. According to this story, when the word went round that any poet could get an audience for his verses at this place, the poets poured in so rapidly and numerously that there simply was not time for all of them to read all that they had to give the world. Besides that, a lot of people came who didn't really appreciate poetry at all. So a circle was organized, and now there is another meeting every week to which only the really elect are admitted. At least, so they say.

This reading circle seems to consist chiefly of poets of whom the world at large has not yet heard, although there are one or two of them who publish regularly. It includes some poets and poetesses who have never even tried to publish their work—who seem to have scorned the public so far. Among these is a woman who calls her poems collectively "Dishpan Lyrics." She is a woman who has spent most of her life cooking and washing dishes, so they say, and she has put into pulsing meter the thoughts and emotions of the telephone and hope of the housewife tied to family tasks, escaping only that her imaginations. Her friends say that her verses would appeal to a large public, but she has never sought to reach it.

An Aesthetic Oasis

Whether this little shop is really a nest of unpublished gems or not, it is certainly one more center of intellectual aspiration in the grimey business place of the West. It is one more court of beauty in the city of beef, one more phase of the strange process by which the city that typifies American commercialism and money lust at its most intense, is also becoming a city of poets, painters and dreamers, a city in which the aesthetic impulse is seen in its most rarefied and extravagant forms.

Perhaps the phenomenon is not really mysterious, either. Perhaps it is partly a matter of action and reaction. Chicago is the place where the great industrial push, which has used most of America's energy for half a century, reached its greatest power. It may be only natural that here the reaction against commercialism should be most marked and extreme.

Then, too, the course of intellectual empire in America seems now to be moving westward. A hundred years ago Boston was the intellectual center of America. Then it shifted to New York. It probably remains there, but New York is more and more becoming a city of poets, painters and dreamers.

THE QUESTION BOX

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Editor, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau cannot give advice on legal, medicinal, and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give full name and address and enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

Q. Has there been a reduction in the wages of coal miners this year?
A. T. K. H.

Q. The wage arguments between the miners and operators in both the anthracite and bituminous fields run for two years, and the present agreements terminate March 31, 1922.
A. When was the last religious census taken and when will the next one be? W. L. H.

Q. The census of religions in the United States is taken once in 10 years. The last enumeration was made in 1916, and the next will be in 1926.

Q. How did belladonna happen to be so-called? A. W. A.

A. Belladonna is Italian for "fair lady," and the drug was given this name because Italian women employed the juice for staining their skin, and to heighten the eyes by giving them a distending appearance.

Q. What is the name applied to the system of lawmaking, which consists of a legislature of two houses?
A. S. A.

Q. The two-chambered system used in all state legislatures is known as the bicameral system.

Q. Is there a town named Banana?
A. T. S.

A. There is an African island north of the mouth of the Congo named Banana, and a town on the island by the same name. It was until lately a station of commercial importance. The building of a railroad to Matadi, with the establishment of trading firms, brought about the decline of Banana.

Q. Who was "Akbar"? A. H. E.

A. Akbar was an emperor of Hindustan; by name regarded as the greatest Asiatic monarch of modern times. He lived from 1542 to 1605.

coming a more market for literary wares, while the people that make them seem more and more to be westerners, and especially middle westerners.

A generation ago poets and artists generally were as scarce along the Chicago river as fish in the Sahara. Then a group of newspapermen gathered there, which included several poets of real merit and at least one good novelist. This group broke up and most of its members became mere popular writers. It is only within the last few years, with the rise of the so-called Chicago school of poets, that the great beef town has begun to get a highbrow reputation.

In part this reputation has been wished upon Chicago. H. L. Mencken, the eminent critic, impressed by the fact that nearly all of our worthwhile contemporary novelists have at some time lived in Chicago, announced to the world that Chicago was becoming the literary capital of the western hemisphere. He published this statement not only here, but in a leading London weekly. The cry was taken up by others. No doubt the case for Chicago as a center of intellectual activity has been considerably overdrawn. The Chicago highbrows are after all a small group or a few small groups.

Taxing Bohemia

But they do seem to be growing. The Dill Pickle Club, down on Tooker Court, was long their favorite rendezvous. It became a show-place, visited by all sorts of curious people, and it recently went into ostensible eclipse when the Government levied an amusement tax upon it!

The Dill Pickle Club is supposed to be closed, and maybe it is but meantime there is a large area of the city up north of the river which is dotted with studio buildings, all of which are inhabited by artists, poets, and other professional worshippers of freedom and beauty. It looks as though Chicago were developing in that section a genuine art quarter, like the Latin quarter in Paris and Greenwich Village in New York.

This flowering of intellect in the great city of wealth and business is a phenomenon attended by romantic happenings—by strange and dramatic social contacts of the kind that O. Henry liked to write about. For the wealthy folk of Chicago, while they generally affect indifference toward all things aesthetic and highbrow, are often secretly curious about them. Especially is this true of the women.

Daughters of the rich seem to be afflicted with highbrow cravings. The Dill Pickle Club began as a band of poor poets, with a mixture of vagabonds, but it was not long before limousines began rolling up to its doors bringing fashionably dressed women. At least one affair of the kind romantic like to write about originated there. The daughter of a wealthy Chicago family fell in love with a young sculptor who wears his hair long, dispenses with a hat, and continually hurls his scorn at the pork packers. The two became engaged, and have been trying ever since to overcome the opposition of the girl's family to a marriage. The sculptor has since achieved some reputation but his hair and his radical ideas remain unchanged, and the uptown family cannot stomach either.

There is a little bookshop in Chicago at which you can buy almost any radical book, pamphlet or periodical ever published, and it is said that this shop is financed partly by Chicago society women—the wives of wealthy business men. It is a sad with them, a method of making contact with a new world, utterly different from their own. So, in more ways than one, the world of art and dream touches hands with that of beef and money.

SAVES 24 LIVES BY GIVING HIS BLOOD

Special to Post-Crescent
Philadelphia—Giving a quart of his life's blood means no more to Thomas Shaw, a Philadelphia grocer, than going to see a baseball game or attending the movies means to the average person!

To date he has submitted to 26 blood transfusion operations, breaking all world's records! Shaw is 26, five feet five inches tall, broad-shouldered, and weighs 179 pounds.

"I have never felt the slightest ill effect from one of my 26 operations," Shaw says. "As soon as the transfusion has been made and the surgeons have dressed and bandaged my arm, I leave the hospital immediately and go about my business just as I do every day of the year." Shaw's case is one of the most remarkable in the records of modern surgery.

Three years ago he suffered slightly from pains in the head, and his family physicians advised blood letting as a remedy for his trouble.

In five weeks three and one-half quarts of blood were taken from his veins and the pains in the head have disappeared.

A short time after that Shaw noticed an advertisement in one of the local papers for someone to volunteer for a blood transfusion operation. He underwent the operation, saved the patient's life, and felt none the worse for his experience.

Since then he has submitted to 25 additional transfusions and has given something over 21 quarts of blood.

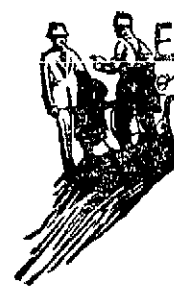

Only two of the 26 patients who received transfusions from Shaw have died, and in both cases he has been assured by the physicians that no human aid could have saved the patients' lives. In all the other cases there have been remarkable recoveries.

"Surgeons in the hospitals tell me," says Shaw, "that there are four types or classes of blood.

"This makes it necessary to test the blood of the patient, and then test the blood of the person from whom he transfusion is to be made. Both parties must have the same type of blood or else physicians will not perform the transfusion.

"In my case, however, the physicians tell me that I have that peculiar quality of blood which blends with any of the four types.

Confessions of a Bride

(Copyright 1920)

A MAN JUDGES BOB

Before morning, my restless mind had about worn me out. I looked 10 years older. I ordered some coffee brought up to my room, then I slipped in to wave a farewell kiss to dear Mother Lorimer. She was asleep as I expected. The ordeal of that silent parting was unbearable. Having got through with it, the rest would be easy, I felt sure.

I went to see Chrys, still bound in strange cataplexy. The sight of her, Bob's twin and so like him, made me hard instead of sympathetic.

What matter whether Chrys lived or died? If she tried to live without love, she would never be happy. If she tried to live with it, she must endure the common disillusionment.

In this state of pessimism and despair, I ordered the car and went down to Mlle. Ginette's. After an hour in her parlors, I picked up my bag and took the street car for the station.

More than once that morning I consulted the blackboard, trying to pick a fast train which would not stop within a hundred miles of my city.

But I could not decide anything. I felt helpless and abandoned at the outset of my independent career. Seldom had I selected a train or bought a railroad ticket. That was Bob's duty. As a devoted wife, I went by whatever train my husband preferred.

So I spent a long hour in the station doing nothing except going from the board to a bench, and pondering. I hoped that nobody detected my nervousness, nor guessed my indecision.

But somebody did. As I stood before the blackboard I heard a familiar voice at my elbow:

"Now, Mrs. Bob! What are you doing down here with a bag? Running away from our engagement?"

I felt sick and weak, as I met the detective's friendly glance.

"What engagement, Mr. Morrison?"

"So you've forgotten that you were going through the upper floors of Certeis' house with me today?"

"I—I'm afraid—I did forget?" I admitted as I relinquished my bag to the detective.

"Come and sit down, little girl! Morrison was as gentle as a father.

"Gosh, I'll say I'm glad I came down here this morning. Now suppose you tell an old man and an old friend just what you're up to, Mrs. Bob!"

Engine Derailed

A piece of track was badly torn up about 3 o'clock Friday morning when the engine of freight train No. 359 on the Wisconsin division of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad left the rails while switching at Balliet's siding. The wheels of the tender were derailed at the switch but were replaced on the rails without difficulty.

A Distinguished Presentation of NEW FALL DRESSES

Silk Frocks

Black and navy are the two leading and fashionable colors for fall and they predominate in this beautiful collection of satin back crepe, cotton crepe and other silk models. Very charming and novel sleeve effects are shown, all NEW. Most beautiful trimmings of beads, embroidery, shirred and looped ribbons and even monkey fur.

Smart new fall fashions at $25, $39.50, $45.00 and $49.50 and up to the most beautiful creations of recent years.

Wool Frocks

The little touches in the way of trimmings, both novel and beautiful, are the distinguishing features of individuality of these wool frocks. For instance some have little bits of bright colored duvetyn or satin, others are trimmed with leather, fancy yarns, silk embroidery, beads, etc.

It is indeed a distinguished presentation of fall models and from $32.50 to $89.50 they're the most beautiful in quality and style.

Fall Millinery Display

Which Emphasizes the Fashionable Importance of Every New Style Creation for Fall and Winter 1921-22

Ready now with a display of fall millinery which offers a selection as large as you'll find in many stores at mid-season. Right now is the time when women most appreciate the invigorating influence of a new fall hat—it adds an attractive and smart touch to any costume. To every woman who is tired of the old things for summer and who is looking for something new, this very elaborate display will draw enthusiastic attention. Moderately priced.

Of first importance—the right Petticoat!

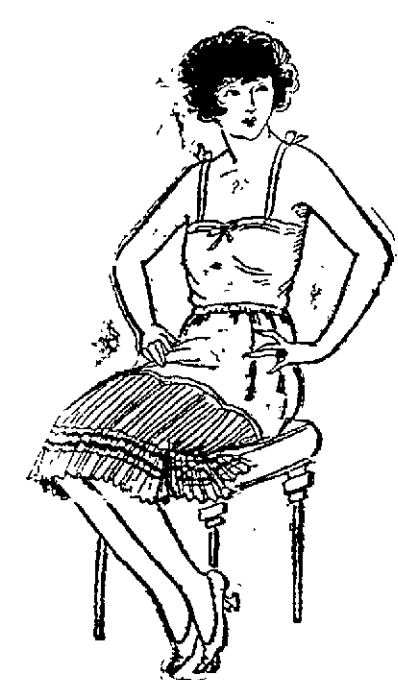

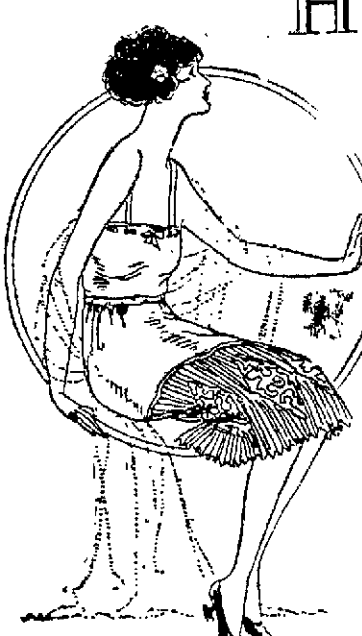

A frock or suit is as good as your petticoat makes it look—the perfect draping of your gown, the trigness of your suit, depend entirely upon the underwear foundation.

"HER MAJESTY" Petticoats are right!

Fashion, Quality and Value form the Trinity of Correctness that distinguishes "Her Majesty" Petticoats. The new season's models have just come in—they are models of exquisiteness in every detail of fashion and workmanship—their designs are fascinating in their unquestioned novelty and appropriateness.

Better Values Than Ever!

"Her Majesty" Petticoats are produced on a nation-wide scale that guarantees a new standard of value. Come in and see these silken beauties—the colorings, the rare selection of styles, the superb fitting qualities will delight you. Adjustable, fitted waist-bands. Continuous placket tape. Three glove clasps. All lengths.

Color—An Important Factor in Fall Fashion

AUTUMN FASHIONS owe much of their charm to color. They have taken their color cue from the glorious season they are to complement. Fluttering Autumn leaves riotous with vivid hues, October's sun's that sink in a blaze of glorious color boast no more exquisite tones than the scarlet quill that makes a trig turban, or a sprinkling of colored beads in oriental blend and pattern that trims a lovely gown. Blouses with their deft inlays of color shun all soberness and prove most dashing in blues that run the gamut and reds from Bordeaux to rich Pompeian. And even furs so largely used gleam with a lustrous texture.

Chris Crow's Dinner

While Sprinkle Blow and the Twins were talking to Buddy Bantam about her nest in the hay stack, somebody else was planning for the night. That was Chris Crow.

Chris was mighty hungry and all the green things growing around everywhere didn't interest him at all. He was watching for Munchie Mouse or Tibbie Toad, or Larry Lizzio Lizzard or somebody that would make a meal worth while. He had to keep alive some way until corn planting time, and the oats Farmer Smith had just put in didn't appeal to him a scrap. Chris never ate, although oat-sprouts and wheat-sprouts he might sample if he found them without too much trouble.

Suddenly something scurried along right under his nose, something very little and brown and soft, with two long ears and the sweetest nothing of a tail.

"Um-m-m!" sniffed Chris. "That was little Cutie Cottontail! Where did he go?" Chris looked up just in time to see Cutie's little nubbin of a tail disappear under the root of an old, old oak tree, and he nodded knowingly. "I'll wait until he comes out," said he. "I'll stand here and not move and catch him unawares."

But Cutie didn't come.

Chris had an idea. "I'll mark the place and go home," said he, "and tonight I'll come back. Rabbits always run around at night, particularly if they are going to get provisions out of Farmer Smith's sassafras garden. I've an idea that Cutie's ma sends him because he's so little he can crawl through that new wire fence Farmer Smith has put up."

Chris went home and took a nap, and by and by when he opened his eyes, the moon was up.

He started for Cutie's house at the same minute that Buddy Bantam flew into the plum tree to roost.

BANK ACCOUNTS

Federal Officers Take Saloon
Men's Funds to Cover Excise Taxes.

Superior—Federal internal revenue officers acting under orders of the Milwaukee district office, have attached the bank accounts of a number of the Hurley saloon men arrested in the raid of last December in an effort to insure the collection of $1,994.80 as an excise tax from each of the men arrested during the raid, it became known here on Thursday.

Cashiers of the two Hurley banks refused to divulge the amounts of the accounts seized by the government. Internal revenue officials also refuse to give information concerning the attachments.

Several of the Hurley men arrested during the now historic raid are among the wealthiest residents of the city of Hurley and are suffering great inconvenience. It is reported from that city.

Action on the collection of the tax has been delayed pending the decision of Judge C. Z. Luse in federal court here on the petition of the Hurley men to quash the indictments charging liquor law violation on the grounds that the warrants used by the dry agents were invalid.

Judge Luse will announce a decision on the petition on Sept. 17.

John A. Cadian, local attorney, retained by a number of the Hurley men said on Thursday that if the indictments are quashed the government will have no ground for the collection of the taxes.

A Changing World

"We are living in a changing world I never thought I could ever be cured of my stomach trouble. Medical science seemed unable to help me. But thank God we are progressing and now Mayr's Wonderful Remedy has delivered me from all stomach symptoms. I am again able to eat anything. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One does will convince or money refunded. Druggists everywhere."

Kaukauna—Ervin Weber is in St. Elizabeth hospital in Appleton with his leg broken above the knee as a result of an accident about 3:15 Thursday afternoon while at work in the Badger Tissue company mill. Mr. Weber was running the crepe paper machine and was watching the paper come over the roll when his overalls caught in a set screw which holds the cores upon the shaft. Before the machine could be stopped, the man had been drawn against the roll.

church congregation play their second game with their sons. The fathers were sadly defeated in the first meeting at which the fathers boasted they would publicly whip the boys. But the tables were turned and the "old men" are now determined to avenge themselves.

Peter Van Dyke was some pitcher in the days gone by and has been playing enough this year to limber him up. It is probable he will keep one the other hand, do practically nothing but play ball and their quickness may offset the somewhat regained ability of their fathers.

Has Second Operation

Mrs. W. W. Johnson, who submitted to an operation in St. Mary hospital, Green Bay, a week ago, underwent a second serious operation Wednesday morning. Her condition is critical. The operations are a result of an accident last winter when the Johnson automobile collided with A. W. Priest's car of Appleton.

Girl's Arm Cut

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Schultz suffered a severe cut in her forearm Wednesday when she tripped over a pipe at the edge of the sidewalk. A milk bottle she was carrying was broken and her arm struck a piece of the glass when she fell.

STORE LOOTED THREE TIMES IN SIX MONTHS

Eau Claire—Edward W. Ponds' general store at Altoona was broken into and a considerable quantity of watches and other jewelry, knives, food, clothing and shoes taken. The manarment was unable to estimate the extent of the loss. The safe was opened but there was no money in it. The robbers left no clues. This is the third time the store has been robbed since February.

Pioneer Helped Build First Badger Railroad

William Comerford Recalls Discovery of Unknown Indian Cemetery.

William Comerford is one of the very few men still alive who in 1855 assisted in building the La Crosse division of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway, the first railroads that swept down from Canada centuries before and were exterminated by the Indians that inhabited the shore of Lake Michigan. Mr. Juneau said that knowledge of the road had been handed down from one generation of Indians to another and he had often heard the older Indians speak of it, but there was no tangible evidence of the massacre until the burial ground, which was unknown to the Indians of that day, was uncovered.

road in the state. He was then 12 years old and his duties were to drive and care for the team of the contractors, Kavanaugh and Downey. When not thus engaged he spent his time searching for Indian relics.

Kavanaugh and Downey resided at Brookfield Junction, 12 miles west of Milwaukee and were awarded the contract for three miles of the road which included a cut through a hill on the bank of the Milwaukee river, which proved to be the burial ground of a tribe of Indians of whom only the older Indians of that day had any knowledge.

Bones, beads and treasures were unearthed and the bones were such as to indicate the Indians were of giant size. Solomon Juneau, first settler of Milwaukee, whose daughters were schoolmates of Mr. Comerford, claimed the bones were those of a tribe of Indians that swept down from Canada centuries before and were exterminated by the Indians that inhabited the shore of Lake Michigan. Mr. Juneau said that knowledge of the road had been handed down from one generation of Indians to another and he had often heard the older Indians speak of it, but there was no tangible evidence of the massacre until the burial ground, which was unknown to the Indians of that day, was uncovered.

The highway from Lander, Wyo., to the park is most picturesque and follows the Wind river into the Teton mountains and Jackson Hole country. The Teton mountain range, famous in story and rich in Indian lore, adds enchantment to the route practically all the way and affords a virgin territory for fishing and big game hunting.

Through pullman standard sleeping car service is maintained daily from Chicago to Lander, Wyo., via the Northwestern railroad.

There is every indication that this new route to what is unquestionably Uncle Sam's most popular National park will rapidly grow in favor with the public and arrangements are being perfected to have it in complete working order with the advent of next summer's tourist season.

There were no steam shovels at that time and a crew of 500 men cut through the hill with pick and shovel.

Occasionally one-fourth or one-third of a carload, due to the supports giving way and a record of this is made by the trainmen who gather up the missing logs at the end of the shipping season.

About the only pulpwood received now is Canadian spruce rafted to Ashland and shipped the remainder of the distance by rail. It is being delivered to the Combined Locks Paper company.

Injured By Cant Hook

Lester Lord, an employee of the Appleton Hub and Spoke company, was seriously injured while unloading logs when the handle of the cant hook he was using struck him under the chin, the leg getting beyond his control. He was removed to St. Elizabeth hospital, where it was some time before he recovered consciousness.

YELLOWSTONE HAS SCENIC GATEWAY

Lander, Wyoming, Has Completed Beautiful Entrance to Park.

Local officials of the Northwestern Railway company have received notice that the "front door to Yellowstone National park" is the slogan given to the new Lander, Wyo., gateway leading directly to the Yellowstone. The formal dedication of this highway has just taken place at the top of the Two-Gro-Tee pass away up in the clouds at an elevation of 9,500 feet. Chiefs of the Shoshoni and Arapahoe tribes of Indians in their full regalia were among those who attended the ceremonies.

BIGGEST CROWD IN HISTORY AT OUTAGAMIE FAIR

Officials of Exhibit at Hortonville Well Satisfied With Attendance.

Between two and three hundred Appleton persons were in the crowd of three or four thousand which nearly filled the fair grounds at Hortonville Thursday—Appleton day. According to fair officials, the attendance was the best in the history of the organization. Nearly every foot of parking space was taken by automobiles and even the abandoned race track was filled with machines. The Appleton delegation arrived at the grounds early in the afternoon and remained until after 3 o'clock.

Stock exhibits at the fair were better than for many years and attracted considerable attention. The swine exhibits were not quite as large as in other years and the poultry department was slightly better. The passing of the horse was emphasized by the small exhibit of equine prize contenders. Only a few horses were in the stalls.

It has been many years since there were so many attractions on the midway as this year. Several free attractions were offered by the fair management.

The health tent conducted by the Outagamie county chapter of Red Cross created considerable interest. The women in charge were kept busy nearly all day ministering to the needs of fair patrons and giving information.

Fair officials said that they were well satisfied with the attendance on Thursday and expected to establish a new record for success this year. Another large crowd was in attendance on Friday, according to reports from the village.

RAILROADS PICK UP LOST PULPWOOD

The work of picking up pulpwood scattered along the track of the Ashland division of the Northwestern road from Laona to the mills of the Fox river valley was completed Thursday. A locomotive, derrick and several flat cars were engaged in the work for over two weeks and several carloads of both hemlock and spruce were saved for the owners.

The wood is sorted as it is picked up, the private mark on the ends of the logs showing to whom it belongs, and it is then forwarded to its destination. In the shipment of pulpwood there is always a loss of logs, oc-asionally one-fourth or one-third of a carload, due to the supports giving way and a record of this is made by the trainmen who gather up the missing logs at the end of the shipping season.

High Test Means High Price
—they go together!

Gravity, high or low, means nothing in relation to the efficiency of gasoline. It is a comparison of weight only. The outstanding characteristic which high gravity has is that it accompanies high price.

The only true measure of gasoline efficiency is the range of boiling point fractions.

Red Crown has a perfect chain of boiling point fractions—without a gap.

BUY RED CROWN
—the High-Grade Gasoline
20.6c a GALLON

It has a low initial boiling point for easy starting, the correct range of boiling point fractions for quick get-away, smooth acceleration and tremendous power and speed.

The very fact that Red Crown contains the correct range of boiling point fractions for efficiency means the greatest economy, for there isn't a particle of waste. It vaporizes to the last drop to make power—that's why Red Crown gives the greatest mileage per gallon.

FUR WILL FLY WHEN BRANDTS STACK UP AGAINST KIMBERLY

Fans Not Very Enthusiastic Over Post-Season Series of Games.

Five things are threatened by the Kimberly team for Appleton when the two teams clash for the last time next Sunday at Kimberly ball park. While Kimberly hasn't any compunctions about beating any of the clubs in the valley league it is particularly desirous of throwing the hooks in to Brandt's aggregation. There is considerable neighborhood rivalry in the breasts of the Kimberly fans and nothing would please them better than to see their pet trample all over the Brandts and incidentally push them out of all chance to grab the valley league gonfalon.

Inasmuch as several members of the Kimberly squad are home boys that rivalry is not lost on the team. Appleton fans who visit the mill town next Sunday afternoon are going to see some real baseball.

It was announced Friday morning that Harvey Stock, who has been pitching in the east, will hurl for the Kimberly crew. Kimberly tried to get Stock early in the season but could not make connections. He is one of the best semi-pro hurlers in the state and is sure to give the Brandts all kinds of trouble.

It is reported from New London that the Edisons have not lost all hope of downing the Brandts here on Labor day. They are making some effort to bolster up their rapidly slipping squad to give Murphy's men a real fight. It would be quite a job for Appleton bugs if the lowly New London gang should slip over a win in the final game of the league season.

Announcement that Appleton is to play a three game series with Oshkosh, Menasha and Fond du Lac was received with mixed feelings by the fans. Many of them could not see how these games could determine the championship of the valley inasmuch as Green Bay is not included in the series. The only rivalry and interest in that series, as they look at it, is the natural desire of any team or any town to win a ball game.

It would be mighty fine if the winner of that series could play Green Bay and definitely determine the championship of the valley. That game would stir up all kinds of interest and incidentally it would give a line on the quality of ball played in the Fox River valley league and the lake shore league.

A game here with the Milwaukee Brewers, who are planning a barnstorming trip, would surely draw a big crowd if weather conditions are at all favorable. It has been contended, and with a good deal of reason, that the quality of ball played in this circuit compares very favorably with that played in the American association. The pitching is about as good but the valley leaguers are not as good sluggers.

That brings up a discussion of what is making the scores so close in this circuit. It is generally conceded that the quality of pitching in the league is much better than the kind of baseball played by most of the other men. That is not to be considered as a reflection on the ability of the fielders but it does mean that there probably would be more fielding errors if the batters could hit the quality of pitching that is seen here. The opposing batsmen have all kinds of difficulty hitting almost any of the valley leaguer hurlers and it is mighty seldom that they are rapped to all corners of the lot and when that does happen the number of errors increases rapidly.

A game or two with the Milwaukee Brewers would show fans here just what kind of baseball they have been seeing. It is most likely to show that the games here have been every bit as good as those seen in American association cities.

"Y" TIES SEYMOUR IN TENNIS TOURNAY

Appleton and Seymour were tied for honors in a tennis match held Thursday evening on Seymour courts, each city winning two matches of three sets each. Seymour won the first and last matches and Appleton won the second and third.

A return match to determine the winner will be held Wednesday, Sept. 7, on the Appleton Y. M. C. A. courts. A. Bradford, F. Bradford, Mays, McGowan, Carlton, Starkey, Pugh and Schlitz composed the Appleton team. The men left at 3:30 Thursday afternoon by auto.

Summary: First match—Seymour, Feurig and Meuhl; Appleton, A. Bradford and F. Bradford, scores—3-5, 6-4, 6-4. Seymour's match.

Second match—Appleton, Mays and McGowan; Seymour, A. Greb and E. Greb, scores 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. Appleton's match.

Third match—Appleton, Carlton and Starkey; Seymour, Walsh and Huth, scores 6-4, 3-6, 6-4. Appleton's match.

Fourth match—Seymour, Barry and Lorch; Appleton, Pugh and F. Schlitz, scores 13-11, 6-4.

SPEED BOATS TO STAGE FIRST HEAT SATURDAY

By United Press Leased Wire
Detroit, Mich. — Miss America, Miss America II and Miss Chicago were selected to defend the Harmsworth trophy against the Maple Leaf VII, Sir

Champion Johnny Kilbane, his "Dukes" and X-ray photos of his fighting equipment showing that as far as bones are concerned, he's "all set" for Danny Frush.

By Roy Grove

No other champion of the prize ring ever had smaller or more brittle hands than the boss of the feather-weights, Johnny Kilbane. But an X-ray test proves they're in fine shape for his coming championship battle with Danny Frush.

For ten years his hands have been a constant source of worry to him. He has banged up his mitts in almost every battle and on two occasions registered complete breaks.

His first injury occurred in a bout with Johnny Althaus. Later the heads and elbows of Harry Donahue, Eddie O'Keefe and John Mahoney put the champion's smackers out of commission for varying periods.

Back in 1916, Johnny broke his right hand in a match with the Canadian featherweight champion, Johnny O'Leary, and then came back with an encore in a give and take affair with Johnny Mealy, two years ago.

So badly was his hand broken in this fight that he had to keep it in cracked ice for hours at a time to reduce the swelling and allay the pain.

His last melee with Freddie Jacks, a couple of months ago, was a repetition of cold applications.

Kilbane is not taking any chances with his coming scrap with Frush. He refers to X-ray photos that have just been made. These were taken to ease Johnny's own frame of mind and to satisfy him, in cold facts, that there is nothing serious.

The only injury visible to say it in plain English consists of an old wound at the apex of the hand—and to be exact, we quote from the medical analysis:

"A careful study of the plates shows no evidence of any recent injury to the bones included. There does exist an old injury to the base of the second meta-carpal bone. A traumatic arthritis exists in the region of the scaphoid and the trapezium."

So what chance has Danny against a guy with all this stuff packed in his right mitt?

"No, they won't bother me when I get in the ring," said Johnny, demonstrating with a doubled right, pounding hard against the palm of an open left. "When a fellow gets going, as I am going for this fight, I could break them all to pieces, and, in my eagerness to win, I would never know I had hurt them."

Kilbane puts his dukes through an electrical treatment every day to strengthen them, and soaks them in brine nightly.

Notwithstanding the Dresden china quality of Kilbane's hands, they have endured the strain of 135 battles in 15 years, and have been the means of his earning nearly a quarter of a million dollars.

Sport Views And News

Again there is talk of a new baseball league next season. Apparently the present league does not quite fill the bill in the opinion of fans and they want to see a change in the circuit. It has been suggested that the circuit next year include teams in Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Menasha, Appleton, Kaukauna and Green Bay. It is argued that a league of those teams would be a compact organization, the cities would be large enough to support good teams and the rivalry would be intense. Kaukauna maintains that it can support a good baseball team and it is said that baseball lovers in the Electric City will make a determined fight against being dropped out of a valley organization. It is said that with a change in management a real team can be put in the field and the support would be sufficient to warrant its retention in the circuit. Perhaps if the moguls in the towns mentioned get together early enough this winter plans can be made for launching that kind of a league next season.

Willie Jackson's manager is a particular case. The other night in Philadelphia Jackson was scheduled to mix with Johnny Dundee. The preliminaries were all over and the stage set for the main go. Jackson's manager demanded his $5,000 in spot cash. The promoter offered $2,500 in fifty dollars and a check for the remainder. This was refused and there was no fight. It probably will be a long time before Jackson is ever signed up for another scrap in Philly.

Youth comes to the fore again in the sport world. Joseph Ford, a strapping 15 years, carried off the title in the public links tournament in New York city. Over 600 golfers took off in this competition but the youngster breezed through in splendid style and had little trouble downing all of his much older opponents. The Gotham papers call him a second "Bobby Jones."

Abe Attell tried to horn his way into the training camp of Danny Frush who will box Johnny Kilbane in Cleveland Sept. 17 in a title bout. Sammy Harris, Frush's manager, showed Attell the gate and told him that he was not wanted within a mile of the training quarters. Evidently, Attell's popularity has dropped with an awful thud ever since he got mixed up in the world series baseball scandal.

Mackay's challenger in the speed boat race to be staged tomorrow and Monday on the Detroit river.

Garwood will pilot Miss America II. George Wood the Miss America and Sheldon Clark the Miss Chicago. Col. A. W. Tate is skipper on the Maple Leaf.

The first heat over the forty mile course will begin Saturday afternoon.

MUDLOFF LEADS BRANDT SLUGGERS WITH .329 MARK

Only Two Appleton Valley Leaguers Hitting Above .300 This Season.

Only two of Brandt's pennant chasers are hitting the ball for percentages of more than .300 according to official batting averages made public Friday. These averages include last Sunday's game.

Mudloff is the hitting star of the team with an average of .329, only one point ahead of Priebe. Durain, who stands third, is hitting at a .270 clip.

Catcher Shott has accepted 154 fielding chances without a slip and is leading the team in fielding with a perfect record. Emmet Woods, first baseman, is second with an average of .984, having accepted 313 chances with only two slips. Schultz is close behind with an average of .967, making two errors in 59 chances.

Following are the batting and fielding averages:

TOWN OF 100 PEOPLE HAS REGULATION GOLF COURSE

Gann Valley, S. D.—Golf bugs must have their game no matter what the weather is.

This village, with a total population of less than 100 persons, boasts a nice little regulation golf course. It claims to be the smallest agricultural town in the country with a course.

The golf epidemic has spread to nearly every family, and the call of "fore" breaks the peaceful evening air as regularly as the day's work is done.

To make it more remarkable, Gann Valley is an inland town, the county seat of Buffalo county.

Watching The Scoreboard

Yesterday's hero: The New York Yankees swept into first place in the American league race by defeating Washington in a doubleheader at 6 to 3 and 8 to 1.

The Cards knocked the Braves out of third place by defeating Pittsburg in a double bill at 10 to 4 and 8 to 0.

The Giants missed a chance to slide into the lead when they were defeated by the Robins at 5 to 1.

Detroit beat Cleveland 7 to 8 in 12 innings and knocked the champions out of the lead.

The Browns made their hits good for runs and beat the White Sox, 6 to 0.

CARROLL THREATS ARE NOT WORRYING LAWRENCE GRIDDERS

McChesney Expects 100 Men to Report for Football Practice This Season.

Eyes of football fans in Wisconsin probably will be turned on Carroll College where President Genfield, head of the institution, has promised to place a team which will show up the other schools in the Little Five. It is said that Carroll is looking forward to the first championship in years this fall and expects to develop the nucleus of a squad which in another year or two will be able to show its heels to the University of Wisconsin and other Big Ten teams.

That all sounds very well but it is reported that football authorities in other Little Five schools will be watching the Carroll squad pretty carefully. They are a little bit suspicious of a championship team that everything is not just right. There probably will be a tightening of the regulations which govern the methods of scouring men for teams.

Coach McChesney of Lawrence, however, isn't much worried over the Carroll threats. He will start the 1921 season with the best looking material which has ever walked onto Lawrence field. At least 100 men are expected to report for practice before the end of the first week of the school year and he expects to have at least four teams practicing at all times. That means he will have plenty of scrimmage teams and plenty of material to pick from.

McChesney is not making any boasts of what his team will do but he is going about with an air of confidence that is unmistakable. He has worked all summer lining up football material and he feels that his work has been successful.

Appleton baseball fans will have an exception interest in football because Durain, Brandt outfielder, will be a contender for a place on the varsity and there is every likelihood that he will be a regular in the backfield. The stocky young fellow is about as fast as a deer on his feet and is one of the best drop kickers ever seen in these parts. He can boot the ball from 50 to 65 yards and get it over the goal posts from almost any angle. Durain ought to be a mighty valuable man for McCresney.

TWO JAPS TO BATTLE FOR TENNIS TITLE

Americans Will Meet Wiry Yellowmen in First Matches for Davis Cup.

By Henry L. Farrell
New York. Two wiry little Japanese will make Nippon's first bid for a world's championship this afternoon when Japan meets America in the first two of five matches for the classic Davis tennis cup. Japan, the survivor in the battle of twelve nations which tried to wrest the trophy, won in Australia last winter by the two noted "Bills," Tilden and Johnston, will meet the great American team in the challenge round for the cup.

William M. Johnston, the fiery little Californian, will meet Ichiji Kumagata in the first match at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. William T. Tilden will oppose Zengo Shimidzu in the second match at 4 o'clock. Richard Norris Williams and Watson Washburn will face the Japanese pair Saturday in the lone doubles match of the tournament.

GARRY WON'T SELL HIS REDS—EVEN TO COHAN

Cincinnati — Following receipts of a telegram from George M. Cohan asking President Herrmann of the Reds for a price on cost of controlling interest in the Reds, Herrmann said: "The Cincinnati club is not for sale to George M. Cohan or any one else." It was reported that Cohan had asked Manager Moran what the club was worth. Herrmann directed that the above statement be wired to Cohan.

SMOKE CITY NINE TAKES GAME FROM YANKS, 6 TO 5

"Pittsburg" defeated the "Yanks" 6 to 5 in a fast game Thursday afternoon in the third game of the world championship baseball series conducted by the boys of the local Y. M. C. A. An error by Ashman at the plate in the last inning resulted in the winning run for Pittsburg. The Smoke city team leads the series by a game the team having won two out of three games.

Joe Thum comes back from Europe with the news that arrangements are being completed for an international bowling match between teams from U. S., Sweden and Germany. Joe, one of the founders of the American Bowling Congress, has been abroad for three months stirring up interest in the event. More power to him! International sporting events bind nations closer together than flowery phrases of silk-hatted diplomats.

Raids—And Results

The Big Ten, comprising eleven of the central states universities, is watching with uneasiness the formation of a semi-pro football association with teams in all large cities between Buffalo and Chicago. Set rules and regulations are natural law in baseball. Other things that happen, outside of the run of rules, are up to the arbiter's judgment and that's law, too. Truly, an umpire always has his say!

This association is signing up collegiate greats of the past. But school officials fear that in the race for supremacy, present college elevens will be raided to bolster the professional ranks. Such raids might sound the death knell for college football in the middle west.

Last Words

Every time an umpire talks, during a baseball game, he says a mouth full of law. Baseball managers who have felt the occasion to protest a ruling

Reform Bureau Head Says 12 Evil Forces Must Be Removed From Country.

"In order to bring in the new America, not only must 12 flaws of the old America be permanently barred out, but three lost arts of the old America must be revived," declared Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, of Washington D. C., superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, who addressed a union mass meeting Thursday evening in the First Methodist church.

The three lost arts are family worship, the Bible in the schools and the "American Sabbath."
"The new America, that is the America that is to emerge from this reconstruction era, will restore all that was good in the old America, when the word American first came to be honored all over the world; but it will be free from some flaws that have marred America. We think that America has been second to no country in civic virtues but there are 12 evils that have stalked this continent that are now dead or dying, killed or mortally wounded—all of them plainly consigned to the down and out club.

They are piracy, duelling, slavery, polygamy, prostitution, puritanism, lottery, race gambling, the opium traffic, the saloon, autocracy and Dol-chevism. The new America will be rid of these as legalized or tolerated evils, and also of the welter of unselfishness and lawlessness, which it is now the chief task of the makers of new America to cure. The remedy is in awaking the ruling majority to their right and duty to rule, rather than allowing some selfish minority to rule or even to dominate the land.

Dr. Crafts quoted H. H. H. as the greatest of philosophical historians, who said "The Shrewdest spots of Europe have studiously cultivated a love of Sunday amusements to keep people quiet under political distresses."

"Careful observers are recognizing that the same sort of selfish foreign forces that are overthrowing law and order in the interest of one class with a view to social revolution and confiscation for their own profit, are battling determinedly to capture the amusements," continued Dr. Crafts.

"The purpose of the Sabbath is only half expressed in saying it is a day of rest and worship. The human race needs more than ever in the past one quiet day, if only to save the nerves, and one altruistic day, if only to prevent a degrading absorption in selfishness.

"Every prize fight is a crime. The practice is illegal in every state in the union. The present revival is a violation which will be tolerated for the time being only."
Dr. Crafts considers close dancing, Cubist art and jazz music as a part of the lawless psychology in the world.

"Jazz is not music; it isn't even a joke—it's a crime," he declared. "We want to get back to American moral normalcy."
The forces which have overthrown the laws of the old America, are the preeminent American institutions, the Daily Bible reading in home and school and the quiet Sabbath. By investigations, it has been learned that it is the churchgoers, not the Sunday punchers who are the freshest and most efficient workers on Monday.
What some people want is a Sunday to produce a blue Monday. George Baneroff, the great historian, said that best examples of sane popular government had been found in the area of the British-American type of Sabbath observance."

Dr. S. Patterson Todd, of the Lord's Day Alliance, who is traveling with Dr. Crafts, gave a short interesting speech explaining the work of the organization. He told how the bill for the repeal of the Sunday law was killed in Wisconsin. He made the startling statement that Sunday motion pictures, and baseball, have been pronounced by the supreme court as illegal and criminal violations of the law.

DEATHS
DOROTHY PATTERSON.
Dorothy Patterson, 11-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Patterson, 1076 Packard st., died at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 Saturday afternoon from the late home, with the Rev. F. L. Schreckenberg in charge. Burial will be in Riverside cemetery.

JOSEPH SCHIMER
Joseph, one year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schimer, 810 Korman ave., died at St. Elizabeth hospital at 7 o'clock Thursday night. The funeral was held from the home at 9 o'clock Friday afternoon with burial in St. Joseph cemetery.

MENASHA-NEENAH
NEWS
MENASHA EXPECTS WIN FROM OSHKOSH

Victory Over Oshkosh Sunday Would Help to Give Appleton Lead in Race.

Menasha.—Menasha baseball team of the Fox River Valley league will journey to Oshkosh on Sunday afternoon to do battle with the Sawdust city aggregation. Menasha still has a postponed game to play with Oshkosh and there has been some talk of a double header to be played at Oshkosh on Sunday. According to present indications only one game will be played on Sunday. Much depends on the outcome of Sunday's game for providing Appleton wins its game with Kimberly on Sunday, which is regarded as almost certain, a Menasha victory over Oshkosh will give Appleton the lead. And it is regarded as probable that Menasha may defeat Oshkosh on Sunday with her present lineup of hard hitters. While a victory for the local team on Sunday would not give Menasha the pennant, Men-asha fans would be pleased to see at least one victory this season over the league-leading Oshkosh team.

Two Bodies to Arrive
The body of Sergeant Joseph Hubbard, A. E. P. has arrived in Hoboken N. J., according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Mary Hubbard on Thursday. The remains are to be brought to Neenah for burial with full military honors although definite arrangements for funeral services have not been made. Sgt. Hubbard lost his life in the Argonne a few hours before the armistice was signed.
He was one of the first to answer the call of his country. In civil life he was ticket agent at the Chicago &
Northwestern depot.

Mrs. Daniel Warner, Second-st.
Menasha, has received notice from the war department that the body of her son, Private Ben. H. Warner has arrived at Hoboken, N. J., and is being held there pending further instructions. A telegram was forwarded to Washington on Thursday asking for the shipment of the body to Menasha and the remains are expected to arrive here Sunday or Monday.

The Ladies Aid society of the Trinity Lutheran church in Menasha met at 2:30 Friday afternoon at the school hall on Broad-st.

An important business meeting of the Knights of Columbus was held at the clubrooms in Menasha on Thursday evening.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church in Neenah met at the church dining rooms Friday afternoon.

Veteran of Civil War
Still Hale and Hearty

GEORGE D. SHAW, Springfield, Mass.

"To say that I feel twenty-five years younger, twenty-five years healthier and twenty-five years stronger expresses what Tanlac has done for me better than any other way I can put it," said George D. Shaw, veteran of the Civil War who now lives at 321 Walnut street, Springfield, Mass.
"I am now seventy-eight years old and I don't hesitate to say I have never known a medicine to equal Tanlac.
For fifteen years I was subject to attacks of indigestion that were so bad at times I would have to lay up for a week or two. For a long time I lived on crackers and milk alone as nothing else agreed with me."
"When I started on Tanlac I weighed only one hundred and seventeen pounds and my days were thought to be numbered. I've been so wonderfully built up, I now weigh one hundred and forty-three pounds and my stomach is as sound as a dollar. In fact, I believe I could eat the old army ration again without it hurting me in the least."
"I never miss a chance of saying in a good word for Tanlac and I would like to urge the boys of the 'Sixties' who are not feeling right to give it a trial, for I am sure it would put them in line again just as it has me. For a man of my age to have no physical trouble to be well and strong and enjoy life as he did twenty-five years ago, is certainly something to be thankful for and there is nothing too good I can say for Tanlac."

GOVERNMENT inspection is a tremendous factor in the production of meat. All meat must be passed by graduated veterinarians, before and after slaughtering. Your greatest insurance against unwholesome meat is the stamp of government approval. Immediate chilling should follow the killing of the animal and should be kept this way from five to ten days to render it in perfect condition.

NEW DREADNAUGHT LAUNCHED IN EAST

Camden, N. J.—Another giant superdreadnaught was added to Uncle Sam's navy here this afternoon when the U. S. S. Washington, a capital ship of the latest type, slid majestically down the ways at the New York Shipbuilding corporation's yard.

Miss Joan Summers, 10-year old daughter of United States Representative W. J. Summers, of Washington, broke a bottle of champagne across the bow of the vessel and named it "Washington" as the props and supporters were released.

PLUNGES TO DEATH FROM PIKES PEAK

By United Press Leased Wire
Colorado Springs, Colo.—Wallace A. Coleman, assistant sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, Denver, and widely known automobile race driver and aviator, was killed Thursday while making a speed test in a Chevrolet racing car to the top of Pikes peak preparatory to the annual race September 5.

Coleman's car was unable to negotiate "hair pin" curve and plunged into a field of boulders, striking one and coming off. The car turned turtle, pinning Coleman under it, breaking his back and fracturing his skull.
